

Unit 5

Introduction to Industrial Relations (6 hrs)

5.1. Meaning of Industrial Relations

5.2. Trade union

1. Collective bargaining
2. Trade union movement in Nepal

5.3. Employee grievances

5.4. Employee Discipline

5.5. Employee health and safety

5.6. Compensation and its relation with industry

5.7. Challenges of industrial relations in Nepal

5.8. Methods of improving industrial relations in Nepal

5.1. Meaning of Industrial Relations

- Industrial relations refer to the relationship between employers, employees, and their representatives (e.g., trade unions) within an organization or industry.
- It encompasses the processes of managing interactions, resolving conflicts, and establishing policies to promote cooperation, productivity, and workplace harmony.
- IR is crucial in tech companies, where it involves ensuring fair pay, reasonable working hours, and job security for software engineers and IT professionals.

Industrial relations as the relationships between the state and employers, between employers and workers' organizations, or among the occupational organizations themselves

Key components include:

- Communication:

- Between management and workers.

- Negotiation:

- Over wages, working conditions, and benefits.

- Conflict Resolution:

- Addressing disputes through dialogue or formal mechanisms.

- Legal Framework:

- Governed by labor laws and regulations. Industrial relations aim to balance organizational goals with employee welfare, fostering a productive work environment.

Importance

- Enhances organizational efficiency and productivity, crucial for meeting tech project deadlines.
- Reduces workplace conflicts through effective communication, ensuring team cohesion.
- Ensures fair treatment, leading to job satisfaction, which is vital for retaining tech talent.
- Promotes economic growth by maintaining industrial peace, benefiting Nepal's IT sector growth.
- IR can address issues like fair compensation for overtime, work-life balance, and union representation for tech workers, ensuring a supportive work environment for future careers.

5.2. Trade Union

- A trade union is an organized group of workers formed to protect and promote their collective interests.
- Trade unions negotiate with employers on behalf of employees to secure better wages, working conditions, job security, and benefits.
- They also advocate for workers' rights and provide support during disputes.

Objectives of Trade Unions:

- ✓ Improvement of wages and salaries.
- ✓ Better working conditions.
- ✓ Job security and fair treatment.
- ✓ Protection against exploitation.
- ✓ Provision of welfare facilities.
- ✓ Promoting industrial peace and cooperation.

Types of Trade union

1. Craft Unions

- Represent skilled workers in a specific trade (e.g., carpenters, electricians).
- Examples: Nepal Electrical Workers' Union (NEWU), Nepal Furniture and Wood Workers Union (NFWU)

2. Industrial Unions

- Unite all workers in an industry, regardless of job or skill level.
- Examples: All Nepal Industrial Workers Union (ANIWU), Industrial unions under GEFONT (General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions)

3. General Unions

- Open to workers from any sector or trade; focus on general labor issues.
- Examples: Nepal Trade Union Congress (NTUC), GEFONT (General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions), ANTUF (All Nepal Federation of Trade Unions)

4. White-Collar or Professional Unions

- Represent professionals such as teachers, doctors, or office workers.
- Examples: Teachers' Union of Nepal (TUN), Nepal Health Professional Federation (NHPF), Nepal Bank Employees Union

5. Public Sector Unions

- Represent government employees (e.g., civil servants, police, teachers).
- Examples: Nepal Civil Servants Union (NCSU), Nepal Teachers' Association (NTA), Unions under Police Welfare Division

6. Blue-Collar Unions

- Represent manual laborers in fields like construction, manufacturing, and transport.
- Examples: Construction and Allied Workers Union of Nepal (CAWUN), Nepal Transport Workers Union (NETWON)

7. Federations or Confederations

- Umbrella organizations of multiple unions.
- Examples: GEFONT (General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions), NTUC (Nepal Trade Union Congress), ANTUF (All Nepal Federation of Trade Unions)

Importance of Trade Unions

- Collective Bargaining Power
- Protection of Workers' Rights
- Improvement of Working Conditions
- Promotion of Job Security
- Advocacy for Social & Economic Justice
- Training and Development
- Influence on Public Policy
- Promotion of Equality

- Collective Bargaining Power
 - Trade unions provide workers with a unified voice, strengthening their ability to negotiate wages, benefits, and working conditions with employers. This collective bargaining power helps ensure that employees receive fair compensation and safe working environments.
- Protection of Workers' Rights
 - Unions play a crucial role in safeguarding workers' rights, including protection against unfair dismissal, discrimination, and exploitation. They offer legal support and representation in disputes and ensure that workers' grievances are addressed.
- Improvement of Working Conditions
 - Through advocacy and negotiation, trade unions work to improve workplace conditions, such as safety standards, work hours, and health benefits. This contributes to a healthier, safer, and more productive work environment.
- Promotion of Job Security
 - Trade unions help secure long-term job stability for workers by negotiating contracts that prevent arbitrary layoffs and provide benefits like pensions, health insurance, and severance packages.
- Advocacy for Social & Economic Justice
 - Unions often engage in broader social and economic advocacy, pushing for policies that benefit their members and the wider community. This includes campaigning for minimum wage laws, social security benefits, and equitable labour policies.
- Training and Development
 - Many trade unions offer training programs, apprenticeships, and educational opportunities that help workers enhance their skills, advance their careers, and adapt to changing industry demands.
- Influence on Public Policy
 - Trade unions significantly impact labour legislation and public policy by lobbying governments and influencing political decisions. This helps ensure that labour laws are fair and reflect workers' needs.
- Promotion of Equality
 - Trade unions advocate for equality in the workplace and work to eliminate discrimination based on gender, race, age, or disability. They play a vital role in promoting diversity and inclusion.

History of Trade Unions

- The World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU) was organized in February 1945 as an international trade union center.
- It was established after prolonged efforts by national trade union centers.
- In 1949, the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) was formed.
- After the formation of ICFTU, national trade union federations started to separate further.
- This led to competition and division among unions affiliated with WFTU, ICFTU, and World Confederation of Labor (WCL).
- All trade unions in SAARC countries share some common characteristics:
 - Low level of union density
 - Direct political affiliations
 - Fragmented union movements, mainly due to political influence and organizational divisions.

History of the Nepalese Trade Union Movement

Early Development:

- 1947 AD (2004 B.S.):
 - The All Nepal Trade Union Congress (ANTUC) was established, marking the beginning of organized trade union activity in Nepal.
- 1947–1951 AD (2004–2008 B.S.):
 - The Biratnagar Majdoor Sabha (Biratnagar Workers Union) emerged.
 - It contributed to the development of trade unionism, especially within the communist movement.
- 1950 AD (2007 B.S.):
 - ANTUC received official recognition.
 - It became the first recognized trade union federation in Nepal.

Post-Rana Period and Growth:

- 1990 AD (2046 B.S.):
 - Multiparty democracy was restored.
 - The lifting of bans on trade unions led to rapid expansion of the union movement.
- 1992 AD (2049 B.S.):
 - The Trade Union Act was enacted, providing a legal framework for trade union activities.
- 1989 AD (2045 B.S.):
 - The General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions (GEFONT) was formed.
 - It was initially the trade union wing of the underground Communist Party of Nepal (Marxist-Leninist).

Key Phases and Characteristics:

- Pre-1990: Trade union activities were largely suppressed under the Panchayat system, though some underground movements existed.
- Post-1990 Democratic Era: The restoration of multi-party democracy led to the proliferation of trade unions. Many unions became affiliated with political parties, which is a distinctive feature of the Nepalese context.
- Growth and Challenges: Rapid growth in union numbers, but often fragmented along political lines. This can sometimes hinder their effectiveness in collective bargaining.
- Key Legislation: The Labour Act (most recently 2017) and Trade Union Act govern their formation, rights, and responsibilities.
- Major Federations: Prominent federations include GEFONT (General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions, affiliated with CPN-UML), NTUC (Nepal Trade Union Congress, affiliated with Nepali Congress), and ANTUF (All Nepal Trade Union Federation, affiliated with Maoist parties).
- Impact: While unions have played a crucial role in securing workers' rights (e.g., minimum wage, social security), the politicization sometimes leads to strikes and bandhs (general strikes) that can negatively impact industrial productivity and investment.
- Current Trends: Efforts are being made to depoliticize unions and focus more on economic and welfare issues. Increased awareness among workers, including those in the IT sector, about their rights.

1. Collective Bargaining

- Collective bargaining is the process where trade unions and employers negotiate to reach agreements on terms of employment, such as wages, hours, working conditions, and benefits.
- Key features include:
 - Negotiation: Discussions to reach mutually acceptable terms.
 - Collective Agreements: Legally binding contracts outlining terms of employment.
 - Dispute Resolution: Mechanisms like mediation or arbitration to resolve disagreements.
 - Benefits: Ensures fair treatment, improves wages, and enhances workplace conditions. In Nepal, collective bargaining is facilitated under the Labour Act, 2017, which grants workers the right to negotiate through registered trade unions.

Collective Bargaining Process

- Preparation
 - Both parties gather data on wages, industry standards, and demands.
- Negotiation:
 - Discussions to reach a mutually acceptable agreement.
- Agreement:
 - Signing of a collective bargaining agreement (CBA) that is legally binding.
- Implementation and Monitoring:
 - Ensuring compliance with the agreement.

Trade Union Movement in Nepal:

- The trade union movement in Nepal began in the 1940s but gained momentum after the democratic movement of 1990.
- They advocate for workers' rights but face challenges like political interference, weak enforcement of labor laws, and informal sector dominance.
- Major Trade unions in Nepal
 - Nepal Trade Union Congress (NTUC): Affiliated with the Nepali Congress (NC).
 - General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions (GEFONT): Affiliated with the Communist Party of Nepal (Unified Marxist–Leninist) [CPN-UML].
 - All Nepal Trade Union Federation (ANTUF): Associated with the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist Centre) [CPN (Maoist Centre)].

Key Developments:

- Labor Act, 1992: Provided legal recognition to trade unions in Nepal.
- Major Trade Unions: Affiliated with political parties, e.g., Nepal Trade Union Congress (NTUC), General Federation of Nepalese Trade Unions (GEFONT), and All Nepal Federation of Trade Unions (ANFTU).
- Focus on improving wages, job security, and workplace safety in industries like manufacturing, agriculture, and services.

Challenges Faced by Trade Unions

- Declining Membership:
 - In some regions, trade unions face declining membership due to changes in the labour market, such as the rise of gig economy jobs and contract work, which traditional union structures may not cover.
- Globalization:
 - Trade unions have responded proactively to the challenges posed by globalization, adapting their strategies to maintain bargaining power in the face of increased competition and job relocations.
- Anti-Union Policies:
 - In some cases, employers and governments may implement policies or practices that are hostile to unions, making it more difficult for them to operate effectively.

Concept of Grievance

- A grievance is a formal complaint raised by an employee regarding workplace issues, which may include unfair treatment, violation of rights, or dissatisfaction with working conditions.
- It typically arises from perceived unfair treatment, violations of rights, or dissatisfaction with workplace policies

- Grievances are essential for maintaining a fair and just workplace, as they provide a mechanism for employees to voice their concerns and seek resolution

“ Employee grievance is a formal complaint by an employee about a workplace situation, policy, or decision that is perceived to be unfair, discriminatory, or contrary to organizational policies or values. ”

Inadequate Wages and Bonus

Unachievable & Irrational Targets and Standards

Layoffs & Lack of Employee Development

A complaint becomes a grievance when the employee feels that an injustice has been committed (E.B. Flippo)

Nature of Grievance:

- Individual or Collective:

- Can arise from a single employee or a group (e.g., through trade unions).

- Expressed or Implied:

- May be formally reported or inferred from employee behavior (e.g., low morale).

- Work-Related:

- Typically involves issues like pay, promotions, discipline, or working conditions.

- Subjective:

- Depends on the employee's perception of unfair treatment.

Causes and Settlement of Grievances

Causes of Grievances

- Poor Communication:
 - Lack of clear communication regarding policies and expectations.
- Unfair Treatment:
 - Perceived favoritism or discrimination in the workplace.
- Work Conditions:
 - Unsatisfactory working conditions, including safety concerns and inadequate resources.
- Job Security:
 - Concerns about layoffs, job stability, or changes in employment terms.

Settlement of Grievances

- Informal Resolution:

- Encouraging open discussions between employees and supervisors to address issues directly.

- Formal Procedures:

- Implementing a structured grievance procedure, which may involve:

- Written Complaints:

- Employees submit a formal grievance in writing.

- Investigations:

- Management investigates the complaint to gather facts.

- Resolution Meetings:

- Meetings are held to discuss findings and propose solutions.

Strategies Handling Grievances

- Open Door Policy/Informal Discussion: Employee first approaches their immediate supervisor. Many issues can be resolved at this stage.
- Formal Written Complaint: If unresolved, the employee submits a formal written grievance to the department head or HR.
- Investigation: HR or a designated committee investigates the grievance, gathering facts and interviewing relevant parties.
- Decision/Resolution: A decision is made and communicated to the employee.
- Appeal: If the employee is not satisfied, they may appeal to a higher authority (e.g., top management, grievance committee, or even external mechanisms like labor courts in severe cases).

Importance of Effective Grievance Handling:

- Prevents minor issues from escalating into major conflicts.
- Boosts employee morale and trust in management.
- Reduces absenteeism and turnover.
- Identifies underlying problems in management practices or policies.
- Ensures a fair and just workplace.

Grievance Mechanism in Nepal

- Nepal has several systems to handle complaints and concerns from citizens, workers, and communities:
- Government Mechanisms:
 - CIAA: Handles corruption and abuse of authority.
 - NHRC: Deals with human rights violations.
 - Hello Sarkar: Public complaint platform for government services.
 - Courts: For legal grievance redress.
- Labor Sector:
 - Companies must have grievance committees (as per Labour Act 2017).
 - Trade unions support workers' rights and complaints.
- Development Projects:
 - Must include Grievance Redress Mechanisms (GRM) for affected communities (required by donors like World Bank, ADB).
- Local Governments:
 - Handle local issues through judicial committees under federalism.
- NGOs and Civil Society:
 - Provide legal aid and informal mediation.

Grievance Settlement Process in Nepal

- Initial Complaint:

- Employees raise grievances to their immediate supervisors or HR.

- Investigation:

- The management conducts an investigation to understand the issue.

- Resolution:

- A resolution is proposed, and the employee is informed of the outcome.

- Escalation:

- If unresolved, employees can escalate the grievance to higher management or utilize union representation.

- Legal Recourse:

- In cases where internal resolution fails, employees may seek legal action through labor courts or relevant government bodies.

Emerging Area of Employee Grievance

- A grievance can be because of wage and salary, working hours, condition of work premises, employment conditions.
- Following are some emerging factors of grievance as a whole;
 - Weakness and failure of Trade Union
 - Sexual Harassments in the Work Place
 - Unorganized Employment Sector
 - Contract labour issues

Employee Discipline

- Employee discipline refers to the rules and procedures established to ensure acceptable behavior and performance in the workplace.
- It includes corrective actions like warnings, suspensions, or terminations for violations (e.g., absenteeism, misconduct).
- A fair disciplinary system promotes accountability while respecting workers' rights.

Objectives of Discipline:

- To ensure compliance with rules and regulations.
- To promote safe and productive work habits.
- To maintain order and a positive work environment.
- To correct undesirable behavior, not just punish.
- To deter others from similar misconduct.

Types of Discipline:

- Positive Discipline:

- Focuses on preventing misconduct through clear communication of rules, training, and positive reinforcement. It emphasizes self-control and responsibility.
- Encouraging good behavior through rewards, training, and motivation.

- Negative Discipline:

- Involves punitive measures taken after a violation has occurred.
- Imposing penalties (e.g., warnings, suspension) for rule violations.

- Progressive Discipline: A widely used approach where disciplinary actions become increasingly severe for repeated offenses.

- Verbal Warning: For minor first offenses.
- Written Warning: For repeated minor offenses or more serious first offenses. Documented in the employee's file.
- Suspension: Temporary removal from work, often without pay, for serious or repeated misconduct.
- Termination: Dismissal from employment for gross misconduct or continued failure to improve after other disciplinary actions.

Causes and Settlement of Disciplinary Problems

Causes:

- Behavioral Issues: Absenteeism, insubordination, or unethical conduct.
- Performance Issues: Low productivity or failure to meet targets.
- Policy Violations: Breaching workplace rules (e.g., safety protocols).
- External Factors: Personal issues affecting work (e.g., stress, financial problems).

Settlement:

- Counseling: Addressing minor issues through guidance.
- Warnings: Verbal or written warnings for repeated violations.
- Suspension: Temporary removal from duties.
- Termination: Last resort for severe or repeated violations.
- Fair Process: Ensure transparency, right to appeal, and compliance with labor laws.
- In Nepal, disciplinary actions must align with the Labour Act, 2017, which mandates due process and prohibits unfair dismissal.

Challenges in Applying Discipline (especially in Nepal):

- Political Interference: In unionized environments, political affiliations can sometimes complicate disciplinary actions.
- Lack of Clear Policies: Ambiguous rules can lead to disputes.
- Fear of Union Backlash: Management might hesitate to discipline due to potential union reactions.
- Cultural Factors: Balancing fairness with traditional social norms.
- Legal Compliance: Ensuring all disciplinary actions adhere to the Labour Act.

Employee Health and Safety (EHS) / Occupational Safety and Health (OSH)

- EHS/OSH is a multidisciplinary field concerned with the safety, health, and welfare of people at work.
- Its primary aim is to prevent workplace accidents, injuries, and occupational diseases, thereby promoting a safe and healthy working environment for all employees.
- It moves beyond simply reacting to incidents to proactively identifying, assessing, and controlling hazards.

Benefits of EHS/OSH:

- Reduced Injuries and Illnesses: Lower rates of workplace accidents and occupational diseases.
- Improved Productivity: Safe and healthy employees are more engaged and efficient.
- Cost Savings: Decreased medical costs, workers' compensation claims, and downtime.
- Legal Compliance: Avoiding fines and penalties for non-compliance.
- Enhanced Reputation: Demonstrating commitment to employee well-being boosts morale and attracts talent.

- Legal Foundation: Primarily Labour Act, 2074 (2017).
- Employer Duties (Labour Act): Provide safe environment, equipment, training; handle hazardous materials safely.
- Mandatory Policies: Employers must create and register an OSH Policy (Section 74).
- Safety Committees: Required for 20+ employees (Section 79).
- Worker Responsibilities: Follow safety rules, use PPE, report hazards.
- Accident Insurance: Employer-paid, minimum NPR 700,000 cover.
- Worker Rights: Stop work for immediate danger; protection from retaliation.
- National Policy: National Occupational Safety and Health Policy, 2076 (2019) for strategic direction.
- Regulator: Department of Labour and Occupational Safety (DLOS).
- International Support: Strong involvement from the ILO.
- OSH Profile: National OSH Profile (2022) assesses the system.

- Key Organizations:

- Occupational Safety and Health Professionals Nepal (OSHPPN): A non-profit professional body.
- Nepal Occupational Safety & Health Academy (NOSHA Pvt. Ltd.): Offers OSH training.

Challenges of Occupational safety and Health

- Limited Awareness: Low OSH knowledge among both employers and workers, especially in SMEs and the informal sector.
- Weak Enforcement: Gaps in effective implementation and monitoring of existing laws due to resource constraints.
- Lack of Safety Culture: OSH often viewed as a burden rather than an integral part of operations.
- Economic Constraints: Difficulty for smaller businesses to invest in safety measures.
- Inadequate Data: Insufficient robust data collection on occupational accidents and diseases.
- Vulnerable Sectors: High-risk conditions in construction, agriculture, and informal sectors.
- Psychosocial Risks: Growing but often unaddressed issue.
- Outdated Equipment: Persistent use of old machinery and infrastructure.

Compensation and Its Relation with Industry

- Compensation refers to the financial and non-financial rewards provided to employees for their work, including wages, salaries, bonuses, benefits, and incentives like health insurance, paid leave, or recognition programs.
- Its relationship with industry is critical, as it directly impacts employee motivation, productivity, and industrial relations.
- In Nepal, compensation issues are a major driver of industrial disputes, as low wages and lack of benefits in the informal sector exacerbate tensions between workers and employers.

Types of Compensation

- Direct Compensation:

- This refers to the monetary rewards given to employees for their work. Examples include:
 - Salary: Regular payment, typically bi-weekly or monthly, that does not vary based on the number of hours worked (for salaried employees).
 - Hourly Wage: Payments made based on the number of hours worked (for hourly employees).
 - Commissions: Payments based on the volume or value of sales achieved.
 - Bonuses: Additional payments beyond the regular salary or wage, often awarded for performance, achieving certain targets, or year-end.
 - Tips: In some industries like hospitality, employees might receive tips from customers for good service.

- Indirect Compensation:

- Non-monetary rewards but still hold monetary value. Examples include paid time off, sick leave, or breaks during work hours.

Types of Benefits

- These are non-salary provisions that companies offer to employees to enhance their overall compensation package. Benefits can be legally mandated or provided as a competitive advantage by companies. Examples include:
 - Healthcare Benefits: Medical, dental, vision insurances.
 - Retirement Benefits: Contributions to retirement plans like 401(k) in the US.
 - Insurance: Life insurance, disability insurance, etc.
 - Paid Time Off (PTO): Vacation days, sick leave, personal days, etc.
 - Employee Assistance Programs: Counseling services, legal advice, etc.
 - Educational Assistance: Tuition reimbursement, professional development courses.
 - Company Perks: Gym memberships, discounts, company car, etc.
 - Stock Options: Offering employees the right to buy company stock at a predetermined price.
 - Childcare: Some larger companies might offer on-site childcare or childcare subsidies.
 - Flexible Working Arrangements: Flextime, remote working, compressed workweeks.

Importance of Compensation

- Employee Retention and Satisfaction: Competitive compensation attracts and retains skilled workers, reducing turnover and fostering loyalty. In industries with high competition, fair pay ensures a stable workforce.
- Productivity and Performance: Well-designed compensation systems, including performance-based incentives, motivate employees to enhance productivity, directly benefiting industrial output and profitability.
- Industrial Relations: Fair and transparent compensation reduces disputes over wages and benefits, fostering harmonious employer-employee relationships. Conversely, inadequate or inequitable pay can lead to strikes, low morale, and conflicts.
- Cost Management: For industries, balancing competitive compensation with financial sustainability is crucial. High labor costs can strain budgets, especially in labor-intensive sectors, while underpayment risks losing talent.
- Economic and Market Factors: Compensation levels are influenced by industry type, market demand, and economic conditions. For example, Nepal's industries like tourism and manufacturing often face challenges offering competitive wages due to economic constraints.

Challenges of industrial relations in Nepal

- Politicalized Unions: Unions often prioritize political agendas over worker welfare.
- Union Fragmentation: Many unions with rivalries, leading to weak bargaining power.
- Large Informal Sector: Majority of workers lack legal protection and union representation.
- Weak Law Enforcement: Ineffective implementation of labor laws (e.g., Labor Act, 2074).
- Low Productivity/Competitiveness: IR issues contribute to hindering economic performance.
- Brain Drain/Migration: Skilled workers leave, impacting domestic labor supply and IR.
- Global Economic Impact: External economic trends influence domestic IR.
- Technological Changes: Create job displacement fears and new IR challenges.
- Skill Gaps: Mismatch between available skills and industry demands.
- Ad-hoc Dispute Resolution: Less reliance on systematic processes, more on informal interventions.

Methods of Improving Industrial Relations in Nepal

- Strengthening Trade Unions
- Implementing Training Programs
- Establishing Formal Grievance Procedures
- Encouraging Collaborative Dialogue
- Investing in Health and Safety Initiatives
- Enhancing Compensation Structures
- Promoting Work-Life Balance
- Facilitating Conflict Resolution Mechanisms
- Raising Awareness of Workers' Rights
- Engaging in Social Dialogue

- Strengthening Trade Unions: Empower unions to effectively advocate for workers' rights and interests.
- Implementing Training Programs: Provide skills training for both management and employees to enhance workplace relations.
- Establishing Formal Grievance Procedures: Create clear processes for employees to report issues and seek resolutions.
- Encouraging Collaborative Dialogue: Foster regular communication between management and employees to address concerns.
- Investing in Health and Safety Initiatives: Ensure a safe working environment to improve employee well-being and productivity.
- Enhancing Compensation Structures: Review and adjust pay to be fair and competitive, motivating employees.
- Promoting Work-Life Balance: Implement policies that support flexible work arrangements for better employee satisfaction.
- Facilitating Conflict Resolution Mechanisms: Establish mediation processes to resolve disputes amicably and efficiently.
- Raising Awareness of Workers' Rights: Educate employees about their rights under labor laws to empower them.
- Engaging in Social Dialogue: Involve all stakeholders in discussions to collaboratively address labor issues and policies.

Extra

Key Principles in Disciplinary Settlement:

- Fairness and Consistency: Rules should be applied equally to all employees.
- Due Process: The employee should be informed of the charges, given an opportunity to explain their side, and have the right to appeal.
- Documentation: All disciplinary actions should be thoroughly documented.
- Progressive Discipline: Starting with less severe measures and escalating if the problem persists.
- Corrective Action: The focus should be on correcting behavior, not just punishing.
